BRITISH WARSHIPS

Are Hastening to the Suez Canal.

LARGE NAVAL DEMONSTRATION

Britain Won't Stand for Russia.s Interference. First Japanese Army Engaged in Huge Land Battle. Russia will back Down

London, July 21st.—Five more British men-of-war have just left the Island of Malta for the entrance to the Suez Canal. A naval demonstration will be made in view of the capture of the English mail boat.

The British cruisers Furious and Venus arrived at Alexandria this morning. The rest of the fleet are following.

BATTLE IN PROGRESS.

London, July 21st.—The Standard's correspondent with the First Japanese army, cabling under date of July 19th says: "Our right flank has been engaged since morning."

The correspondent of the Times with General Kuroki's army, under date of July 19th confirms the Standard's correspondent's report that the right flank of the army had been fighting since dawn.

ANOTHER STEAMER SEIZED.

The China Mutual Steam Navigation Company's steamer Pakling is believed to have been seized in the Red Sea. The Pakling sailed for Middleborough, England, June 18th and London July 2nd, bound for Yokohama. She is a British owned vessel.

RUMORS OF JAP DEFEAT.

Ta Tche K'ao, July 19th.—Delayed in transmission.—Sharp fighting was reported yesterday to the northeast, and it is stated that the Japanese lost 60 guns. Their forces were pushed back and their position occupied as far as Saimatsza. If this report be true it indicates a heavy engagement.

MOVEMENTS OF VESSELS.

Tokio, July 20th.—The steamer overhauled by the Russian Vladivostock squadron was the Yakashima. She arrived at Mororan at noon to-day and reports that she left the Russian vessels steaming to the southeast at great speed. This course creates the impression that they are heading for Saigon, the capital of French Indo-China, although it is possible that this course is a ruse to drive off the Japanese.

RUSSIA'S INTENTIONS.

St. Petersburg, July 20th.—It is probably the purpose of Admiral Bezobazoff with the Vladivostock fleet to raid the coast towns of Japan, capture merchantmen and make a naval demonstration off Yokohama, and generally create a panic among the population in order to compel Admiral Togo to reinforce Admiral Kamimura and thus weaken the fleet off Port Arthur.

GREAT BRITAIN EMPHATICALLY PROTESTS.

St. Petersburg, July 20.—Sir Charles Pardinge, the British ambassador, this afternoon on behalf of his government, presented a strong protest to Russia against the seizure in the Red Sea of the Oriental steamer Malacca, which was carrying three thousand tons of British government stores for the naval establishment at Hong Kong, each case of which was marked with the broad arrow which is the government stamp.

The ambassador also presented a general protest against the action of the Russian volunteer fleet steamers in the Red Sea.

RUSSIA WILL BACK DOWN.

Paris, July 20.—Information reaching government quarters here leads the officials to believe the Russians will release the British and German merchantmen seized in the Red Sea as a means of averting international complications.

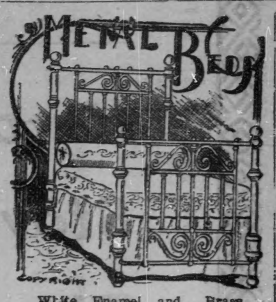

RUSSIA WAS AFTER CONTRABAND.

St. Petersburg, July 20.—Russia seems prepared for any representations Great Britain may make on the subject of stopping ships on the Red Sea.

It is understood that before sending the cruisers there the Russian authorities became satisfied through an elaborate system of espionage, that an immense amount of contraband was going from England through the Red Sea to Japan and they decided to stop the traffic.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS IMMINENT.

It is understood that if this traffic is now diverted to the Cape route the Russian Admiralty is prepared to send ships to the Cape of Good Hope. If Great Britain objects to the passage of the Dardanelles by more vessels of the volunteer fleet, the ships intended for cruising off the Cape may be sent from the Baltic. In this connection very important developments are believed to be imminent.

FATTENING CHICKENS FOR MARKET

(Contributed).

In order to have the chickens plump and well fitted for the market when they are at the most profitable age, they should be placed in the fattening crates when they are three months old. It is not meant by this that chickens cannot be fatted profitably when they are more than three months old. Suitable market chickens of any age will show gains in the crates. In selecting chickens for fattening, those should be fatted that have a good constitution, denoted by short strong beak, head wide between the eyes, lively appearance, and that are of medium size, and are of a broad square shape, with short, and straight legs set well apart.

In fattening chickens for market, it is advisable to use the fattening crates recommended by the Poultry Division, Ottawa. If only a small number of chickens are to be fatted, packing boxes of suitable dimensions can be adapted for the purpose. The open top of the box should become the bottom of the crate, and one side should be removed for the front. Laths should be nailed up and down the front, and also lengthways of the crate to form the floor. The laths are placed at the same distance apart as recommended in the construction of the fattening crate. A board should be loosened in the top of the crate to remove the chickens from, and a feed trough arranged in front. A shaping board and shipping boxes are also required.

A satisfactory fattening ration is one that is palatable and that will produce a white-colored flesh. Ground oats, finely ground or with the coarser hulls sifted out, should form the basis of all the grain mixtures. Ground corn fed in excess will result in a yellow-coloured flesh of inferior quality; ground pease impart a hardness to the flesh that is not desirable. Ground oats, ground buckwheat, ground barley and low grade flour are the most suitable meals for fattening.

SATISFACTORY MEAL MIXTURES.

1—Ground oats (coarser hulls removed).

2—Sittings from rolled oats (no hulling dust should be included).

3—Two parts ground oats, two parts ground buckwheat, one part ground corn.

4—Equal parts ground oats, ground barley, and ground buckwheat.

5—Two parts ground barley, two parts low grade flour, one part wheat bran.

The ground meal should be mixed to a thin porridge with thick sour skimmilk or buttermilk. On the average 10 pounds of meal require from 15 to 17 pounds of sour skim-milk. A small quantity of salt should be added to the mash.

When sufficient skim-milk or buttermilk cannot be obtained for mixing the mashes, a quantity of animal or raw vegetable food should be added to the fattening ration.

The chickens should remain in the fattening crates for a period of 24 days more or less depending on the conditions of the bird. Before they are placed in the crates they should be well dusted with sulphur to kill the lice. They should be again sulphured three days before they are killed.

It is necessary to feed the chickens lightly the first week they are in the crates. A small quantity of the fattening food should be spread along the troughs, and as this is eaten more food should be added, but not as much as the chickens would consume. The food should be given three times a day, and after feeding the troughs should be cleaned and turned over. The chickens should receive fresh water twice a day, and grit two or three times a week while in the crates.

The chickens should be given twice a day as much food as they will eat. Half an hour after feeding the feed troughs should be cleaned and turned over.

At the commencement of this period one pound of tallow a day should be added to the mashes for every seventy chickens. The quantity of tallow should be gradually increased so that at the latter part of the period one pound of tallow is fed to 50 chickens. The chickens should receive the fattening food twice a day.

Prin. Riddell in Toronto

Globe:

Prin. J. H. Riddell, Principal of Alberta College, Edmonton, addressed the Methodist Summer School on the Victoria College lawn last evening, making an eloquent appeal to the Church and the people of eastern Canada to do their duty to the great Canadian West. Mr. John N. Lake presided, and there were about 300 present. Prof. Riddell declared that the future character of the Canadian people will depend upon the character of the millions who will find homes on the rich prairies of the Territories. There is easily room for 50,000,000 people in the West, for 8,000,000 in the valley of the Saskatchewan alone, and the determination of their future for good or evil depends upon the foundations now laid and the direction now given to the thoughts and aims of the settlers pouring in. In this work the Church and the people of the east have a distinct and important duty, which it behooves us to recognize and strive to perform. The possibilities of the great west, said the speaker, are undetermined, but that the people of that country shall be filled with the love of truth, right and liberty is the duty of the Church in eastern Canada.

ATTENDANCE IN PARLIAMENT

During a discussion which took place in parliament on July 13th on the length and lateness of the session, Mr. Oliver spoke as follows:—

Mr. FRANK OLIVER. I wish to support the position taken by the member from Macdonald (Mr. Boyd) in calling for an earlier opening of the session of parliament, but I cannot support the attitude of the hon. member for East York (Mr. McLean) or of the member for North Victoria (Mr. Hughes). As a specimen of cold blooded nerve, the appearance of these two gentlemen on the scene at this particular stage of the game, beats the record. I do not hold the government blameless for not having called the session earlier, but it is a matter of notoreity, it is a matter within the knowledge of every member of this House,, that while the government has been to blame for not calling the session earlier, that has not been the sole reason for the undue lengthening of the session. It is not by any means the sole reason why we are here in mid-summer when we should be at home attending to our business. If the length of this session has been a burden to the hon. member for East York (Mr. McLean) and to the hon. member for North Victoria (Mr. Sam. Hughes), surely these gentlemen can sympathize with us who have had to stay here day in and day out, week in and week out, month in and month out, while they were attending to their own business, or serving their own pleasure at home or anywhere else they may have been. If this House is in session today in the middle of summer, it is because from day to day and from week to week, if not from month to month, a handful of members on the other side of the House, have deliberately, persistently and purposely obstructed the business——

Mr. SPROULE. I rise to a point of order, and ask your ruling, Mr. Chairman, if that language is to be allowed in this House.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER. (Mr. Macdonald). I was just about to remark that the hon. gentleman (Mr. Oliver) cannot say that hon. members purposely obstruct business.

Mr. OLIVER. I will amend that statement by saying——

Some hon. MEMBERS. Take it back.

Mr. OLIVER. I will take it back unreservedly and say, that so far as I can see their obstruction was absolutely purposeless.

I want to state the fact so that it may go on record for the benefit of the electors of this country, that from day to day and from week to week, a handful of members of the opposition numbering from ten to fifteen or perhaps not more than 20, have held this House in session, not discussing questions of principle, not discussing questions of importance, but discussing trivialities, discussing quibbles, discussing anything that could delay the business of parliament. If the electors of this country knew the manner in which their business was conducted in parliament by certain of their representatives on the other side of the House, they would be ashamed of these representatives and ashamed of themselves. Because it is possible for members who live within a days' ride of this House to transact their business at home and still put in an occasional appearance here, it is a fact that these gentlemen systematically do so, and those of us who are not in that happy position are compelled to suffer in consequence. We have suffered year in and year out, and so far we have suffered in silence. But, when men who pay so very little attention to their parliamentary duties as the hon. member for East York (Mr. McLean) get up to read lectures in this House, it is time for somebody to speak out and to tell the electors of this country how their business is being transacted by a portion at any rate, of their representatives.

THE BELL TELEPHONE AND THE C P R.

During the discussion in parliament on July 14th, on Mr., McLean's proposal to invalidate the agreement between the Bell Telephone Company and the C. P. R. whereby that company is given the exclusive right of entry to C. P. R. stations, Mr. Oliver spoke as follows:—

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot agree with the argument that this agreement between the railway company and the telephone company is a good agreement, that it should be respected, that it should be considered, in view of this condition which is a general condition—general at least in my part of the country—that the Bell Company has no telephone in the railway station, but that it has a right under that agreement to have a telephone there and to prevent anybody else from having a telephone there. The argument means that when a local telephone company wishes to connect with the Canadian Pacific Railway stations this local company would have to pay damages because of the violation of an agreement between the railway company and the Bell Telephone Company, when the Bell company had not done anything under that agreement and had suffered no injury whatever.

Mr. GOURLEY. If there was no injury there would be no damage.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Exactly.

Mr. GOURLEY. And if it were not installed I can see the damages would be merely nominal.

Mr. OLIVER. I maintain there should be no admission of any damages in such a case, and if the argument is that there are damages in such a case, then I, for one say that the law should be amended, and that no such a thing should be permitted; that where the public interest or the public use requires the entry of the telephone system which is established in that part of the country, into the railway station, no agreement between the telephone company and the railway company should be held good which would prevent that free access.

Mr. GOURLEY. You would not want us to steal your property would you? Neither must you ask us to steal other people's property.

Mr. OLIVER. Whose property is being stolen?

Mr. GOURLEY. The Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. Oliver. Not at all, they have no property. If the argument is that the railway company's property is being stolen or being taken or used without their consent, I can understand it, but that is not the claim. The local telephone company is prepared to pay for the use of the railway company's property, or for any inconvenience to which the railway company may be put. The question is as to the Bell Telephone Company's property, and I say that the Bell company has no monopoly in such a case, even though they have an agreement. If that agreement is good in law, the law should be changed so that it shall not be good.

After further discussion Mr. Oliver continued:

Mr. OLIVER. Those of us who are not learned in the law are at a very great disadvantage is discussing this question, now that it has become a legal question. But at the risk of getting into deep water, I will say that it appears to me that possibly as much injustice is done in the name of law as is done against the law; and it seems to me that in this particular case, when the question is between the sanctity of contracts and the jurisdiction of parliament, there is a parliamentary view of the case which may be taken as well as the legal view. It it a possibility, and a reasonable possibility, that a contract may be so palpably improper as not to require any reference to a court in order to have it ignored by parliament. If parliament is to abdicate its authority to such an extent that whenever a question of any intricacy comes up, no matter what injustice a certain view of the case may do to the people, a decision upon that question may be postponed, and postponed practically indefinitely by reference to the courts, then parliament is aiding and abeting injustice, instead of preventing injustice. Now, I submit that this agreement between the Bell Telephone Company and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, if interpreted in the light oft the judgment of the railway commission, is so far beyond and outside of anything that is reasonable, is so absolutely and utterly unreasonable, is so greatly in restraint of liberty of action by the people and the Leerty of legislation by this parliament, that parliament would be more than justified in absolutely ignoring it. Taking the case as it stands. The judgment of the Railway Commission says that the towns of Port Arthur and Fort William may have access to the railway stations on payment of the costs of installation, the costs of operation, and damages to the Bell Telephone Company for the breaking of their contract with the railway company. The bill of damages presented by the Bell Telephone Company, which, if their side of the case is to prevail, the towns of Port Arthur and Fort William must pay, amounts to the value of the transportation which that company has secured in times past from the Canadian Pacific Railway—many thousands of dollars. That means simply that the towns of Port Arthur and Fort William cannot have that access to the railway stations by their municipal telephone system to which they are entitled. It simply debars the possibility of justice in the matter. If the interpretation of the railway commission is correct, that agreement between the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Bell Telephone Company is such a trespass on the rights of the people that parliament would be doing less than its duty if it did not take measures to ignore it and to secure the people in their rights. This question appeals to me very strongly. The Calgary and Edmonton Railway runs lengthwise of my constituency, three hundred miles, and the town of Carlston is forty miles south of its southern terminus. There is a string of towns along that railway each large enough to have a telephone system of its own, some fourteen or fifteen in number, and in every one of them access to the railway stations is the essential feature of a useful local telephone system. If the local system cannot have access to the railway stations, it is practically useless. When the question was up before, I

Largest ShipAfloat

Toronto World:

Sixty years ago and more a ship was designed which has remained the largest ever floated until a few months ago when the Baltic was launched at Messrs. Harland & Wolff's yards in Belfast. This monster has just completed her maiden trip across the Atlantic. Not a mishap of any kind marred the voyage. The massive and intricate mechanism of this huge liner worked as smoothly as a Swiss chronometer. Today she floats a living contradiction of those prophets who asserted that it would be impossible to manage a steamship larger than the Great Eastern. Many years ago these experts were confounded by the increasing dimensions of Atlantic liners. It was seen that, sooner or later, a ship larger than the Great Eastern would be constructed. Each new vessel approached more closely the colossal dimensions of Brunel's wonder, the Cedric and the Celtic being almost as large. Now comes the Baltic and there passes away the record that has stood for more than half a century.

The Baltic from the tip of her beak to the end of her tail is 726 feetlong, or rather more than one-seventh of a mile. She stands 240 hands high, being much taller than the largest horse ever seen, not excepting Clydesdales. He bulk almost equals that of the Lucania and the Campania combined. A million cubic feet of space is allotted for cargo, and in this can be stowed 28,000 tons. She displaces 34,000 tons, loaded to a draught of 32 feet; loaded to 38 feet draught, her displacement will be more than 40,000 tons. The Baltic has accommodation for 3,000 passengers, and she carries a crew of 350 men. The vessel has twin screws, like nearly all of the White Star liners, as well as quadruple expansion engines, arranged on the balance principle, which is said to almost entirely do away with vibration. Her best speed is about seventeen knots an hour, which is by no means fast for a modern steamer, but she is designed for comfort rather than for record-breaking voyages. If J. Pierpont Morgan can afford the time to come over on the Baltic, most people should be able to sacrifice a day or so on this floating palace.

One of the most pleasant features of the boat is the improvement in arrangements made for second-class and steerage passengers. The latter have the run of a large part of the upper deck, many of them sleep in rooms containing only two, three or four persons each, instead of in the old cen berths, and they have their meals seated at tables, on revolving chairs, and waited on by stewards. The second-class passengers also have a share of the upper deck with ample accommodation in the way of dining room, smoking room, etc. The cabin passengers are palatially housed. They have no fewer than four decks on which to disport themselves—sun, boat, promenade and upper, the latter being 63 feet from the water. Their dining saloon is the width of the ship, 75 feet, and has seating accommodation for 370 persons. The smoking rooms, library, bath rooms, and state-rooms are unusually spacious, and magnificently furnished. The Baltic has a double bottom and is fitted with numerous water-tight compartments. Her structural strength is commensurate with her extreme size and her owners claim that no safer steamer rides the waves on any of the seven seas.

Comparing the Baltic with the Great Eastern, the London Times finds that the former is superior in length between perpendiculars, in displacement and in tonnage. The latter scores in breadth and depth moulded. The Great Eastern's beam was 83 feet (including paddle boxes, 120 feet) and her depth 58 feet, compared with the Baltic's 49 feet. Her gross tonnage was 19,000. Had her form been more square and her lines less full than those of the Baltic, she would more closely have approached the capacity of the modern leviathan. Furthermore she lacked the huge superstructures which are such a feature of the Baltic, and of most modern liners. She practically ended at the structural deck. The displacement of the Great Eastern was about 30,000 tons. The engines of these two monsters are not very different in weight, but the pressure of steam to the square inch is two hundred pounds on the White Star liner and only 25 pounds on the Great Eastern. The former develop twice the power and drive the ship at 17 instead of 13 knots an hour and consume only 250 tons of coal a day instead of 400.

In an address delivered before the British Association in 1899, Sir William Henry White, director of naval construction, made some interesting general comparisons between the vessels of the present and those of the day of the Great Eastern and the Britannia. Sir William said that length has increased about 40 per cent, displacement 300 per cent, and speed 50 per cent. Before we achieve much greater speed on large vessels some lighter material for the construction of hulls must be discovered. Even then increased speed will depend on a number of considerations, such as the employment of special fuels, steam pressures, rates of revolution, and the multiplication of screws. Vast improvements have been made in all these departments in the past half century, and a distinct gain is also to be noted in the form of vessels, leading to less resistance. In the matter of design there does not appear to be much opportunity for immediate improvement. We are apparently very near perfection in this line. Instead of a voyage across the ocean consuming nearly three weeks, as it did in 1840, it occupies less than a week, and instead of carrying 100 passengers, 3,000 may now be comfortably accommodated. Had the old rate of coal cunsumption continued, 9,000 tons would be required where 2,000 suffices at present, and were the average engines as heavy in proportion they would weigh about 14,000 tons. In other words, machinery, boilers and coal would exceed the total weight of the Campania as she floats today.

Sir William White is broad-minded enough to admit the liklihood of many radical changes within another fifty years. In the meantime progress will be made along the lines of past progress. The use of water tube boilers would become more general and with their adoption he predicts many advantages, economy of weight, greater safety and quicker steam raising being the chief of them. Liquid fuel is necessary, however, if the best results are to be obtained from these boilers, and at present coal bids fair to hold its own. The human factor, he said, is important in all steamship performances, and more skilled and disciplined management must accompany mechanical improvements. The tendency will also be toward greater regularity of service, for with a ship's increased length and depth comes a greater certainty of her maintaining speed at sea. The day when the Atlantic liners will be as true as the tides, as punctual as express trains, may dawn for the present age to behold and marvel.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

BUYING A RAILROAD

The Transcontinental Railway is Seeking a new Feeder. Object of the Purchase

Bulletin Special Dispatch.

Ottawa, July 21st.—A rumor is persistent here that the Grand Trunk Railway is after the Canada Atlantic. The recent minute inspection by Chief Engineer Hobson would not be made in hot weather for pleasure.

The purchase of the Canada Atlantic would give the G. T. P. connection at Scotia Junction for North Bay and also a large lake traffic from Depot harbor.

It would also prevent Mackenzie and Mann from getting a valuable link for their transcontinental project.

LLOYDMINSTER ITEMS

LIBERAL CANDIDATE

In Strathcona Constituency Addresses Bumper Meeting. Unanimous Vote of Confidence

Bulletin Special Dispatch.

Lloydminster, July 20.—Last night Mr. P. Talbot, Liberal candidate for the Strathcona constituency, addressed a large meeting of electors here. He was received with cheers upon rising to speak. He went fully into the tariff question and explained the tariff of the Liberal government in comparison with the high protective tariff of the Conservative party. His argument appealed to the farming community as they were all purchasers of manufactured articles and the high tariff would mean that machinery purchased would cost more. The Grand Trunk Pacific was fairly dealt with and it was clearly shown that the only salvation for the west was the Grand Trunk Pacific as a competing line to the Canadian Pacific railroad. Especially as the Grand Trunk Railroad is not receiving any land grant, that is, reserving Dominion lands for the actual settler. A practically unanimous vote of confidence was given for the Liberal government; also in Mr. Talbot as candidate for the constituency.

A Liberal Association was formed, the following being the officers:—

Honorary president, W. W. Amos, M.D., J.P.

President, A. J. Bowen.

Vice President, Arthur Blackwell.

Secretary, N. A. Kilburn.

The association is forming local committees to work in the outlying districts. The feeling of the colony is strongly in favor of the government as they have received such consideration and kindness from them.

Dr. Goodwin, dentist, of Edmonton, paid the town a professional visit.

Messrs. Sample and Miller from Ontario, are opening up in the gents' furnishing line on Alberta avenue.

Rev. Mr. Davies from Liverpool, England, has been appointed by the church continental society to assist Rev. Mr. Lloyd in his clerical work here. Mr. Davies has just arrived, and is now at work with Mr. Lloyd in arranging the erection of several churches throughout the colony. Mr. Lloyd has also the co-operation of Rev. Mr. Softley, from Ontario, who is located 25 miles east of here and Mr. Smyth, from Ireland, who is located 10 miles west of town.

Rev. C. A. Wilson and wife arrived Friday last. Mr. Welson is taking charge of the Methodist work. At a meeting of the church a board was organized and arrangements are being made for the erection of a parsonage and church.

CANADA'S EXHIBIT

AT THE WORLD'S FAIR

An Exhibit From Northern Alberta Would Prove of Great Practical Benefit

Geo. S. Montgomery, of the Edmonton Coal Company, returned Monday evening from attending the World's Fair in St. Louis.

He speaks in terms of the greatest praise regarding Canada's exhibit at the Fair stating that it is an eye opener to the world at large, easily surpassing those from many of the States of the Union. The Canadian building is particularly well arranged and the officials in charge are very obliging. A specially fine exhibit of woods from British Columbia occupies a prominent position. The agricultural exhibit is very creditable generally but Mr. Montgomery is confident that at the present time an exhibit could be arranged at Northern Alberta that would easily surpass anything at the Fair in this line. A suggestion he puts forward is that the town councils of Strathcona and Edmonton take up this matter jointly and have an exhibit of our different grains, grasses and vegetables prepared and hurried through to St. Louis where the Canadian Commissioners would doubtless see that it was put where it would do the most good. Besides the horticultural exhibit a large coal exhibit could be sent from the two towns. The World's Fair offers a supreme opportunity for judicious advertising and this method would doubtless be of much practical benefit.

While away Mr. Montgomery spent some time in Central Illinois. This is a particularly fine district very much similar in many respects to Northern Alberta. At the present time there are hundreds of rich farmers' sons about to set out for a new country. The distribution of Northern Alberta immigration literature in that district would do much good. In Central Illinois there is very great interest taken in Western Canada and nearly all the enquiries are of Northern Alberta. Mr. Montgomery took samples of our vegetables and our coal down with him which attracted a great deal of surprise and attention. The immigration to this district from Illinois is expected to assume large proportions in the near future.

drew attention to these facts. Since then the Bell Telephone Company have strung a wire from Cardston to Edmonton along that 209 miles of railway, and I presume are in a position of entrenched monopoly in every railway station. If those fourteen towns now existing and fourteen more rapidly growing wish to have a local telephone system, they will find themselves in this difficulty, that they will be debarred from access to the railway stations. The question thus comes closely home to the people. We are simply in the hands of the Bell Telephone Company, and that company has the monopoly in the district of Alberta from end to end. There is no doubt that the people there could establish a local service which would give very much cheaper rates than can any company which looks to a profit; and to prevent their getting access to the railway stations is to prevent their spending their own money in providing their own telephone accommodation. It is evident, therefore, that the agreement between the Bell Telephone and the railway companies is a trespass on the rights of the people, and this parliament will be doing less than its duty if it does not take measures to relieve the people from that injustice.

As regards precedents, let me call attention to the fact that a few years ago the whole grain trade of the Northwest was in the hands of a ring of elevator owners because of an agreement between them and the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Canadian Pacific Railway refused to handle any grain except through these elevators. They refused to give sidings at railway stations except to elevators of a certain capacity, and the result was that the people were robbed of hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. When that question was brought up in this House I remember that those of us who demanded the free right of shipping grain were denounced as socialists; but to-day there is a law on the statute-book which enables every farmer to obtain shipment of his grain at any railway station in his turn.

Mr. MACLEAN.—And that was brought about by an Act of parliament and not by a decision of the courts.

Mr. OLIVER. There was no decision of the courts annulling the agreement between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the elevators. There was no change in the conditions, but parliament, in its wisdom, decided that that agreement was a trespass on the rights of the people and annulled it.

After further discussion Mr. Oliver continued:

Mr. OLIVER. I cannot at all agree with the position taken by so many legal men of this House, that the case as between parliament and these companies is the same as it would be if between a private individual and these companies. Parliament, I submit, occupies an entirely different position. If there is a dispute between a private individual and these companies, if the towns of Port Arthur and Port William have a grievance against the Bell Telephone and the Canadian Pacific Railway companies, they must go to the courts. They did go to the Railway Commission and got judgment from which judgment I presume they are entitled to appeal. But that was nothing whatever to do with our action, nor should it govern our action in any degree. We are responsible for the law under which that decision was rendered and under which the decision in appeal will be rendered. And if that law, for which we are responsible, does not give justice, the time and place to deal with the question is here and now. Plenty of evidence has been placed before this parliament to-day to show that injustice has been and is being done and may be continued interminably. As to the charge that all those who desire to see justice done the public are law-breakers, or wish in any way to contravene the law, or infringe in any degree on the rights of any one, that charge is utterly unfounded. I am not a lawyer, but I would venture to state a first principle of law which will not be denied by any legal gentleman in this House, and which entirely covers the case. It is this, that a contract between any two parties entered into against the interests of a third party is not binding as against that third party. I would like any of the legal gentlemen to say whether that is a correct statement of a correct principle or not. In this case these two parties have entered into a contract which is subversive of the interests of a third party, namely, the public. I say that no such contract is good in law, and when we demand that it shall not be recognized, we are not infringing in any degree on the legal or moral rights of any one. There is no necessity for a reference to any court for a decision on such a point. There are cases of fight and wrong which are so plain that the duty of parliament is clear, no matter whether by one quibble of law or another it be possible to carry the case to the courts. This parliament is here to make the law, to establish courts and, above all, to see that justice is done.

WEDDING BELLS

On Wednesday, July 20th, at the residence of the groom's sister, Mrs. Hugh McLean, of Edmonton, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized between Mr. Murdoch McKinley, of Stony Plain, and Miss Leaffie Alberta Imeson, of Seeley's Bay, Ontario. The Rev. Mr. Douglas officiated. Mr. J. W. Dodds, of Edmonton, assisted the groom and Miss Pearl Strong, Stony Plain, acted as bridesmaid. After luncheon the young people left, accompanied by the good wishes of their friends, for Stony Plain, where they will make their home. The bride received many beautiful and costly presents.

Western Pluck

Blairmore Times.

The old saying that "you can down a good outfit, but you can't keep it down," has again been proven true by the last year's history of our neighboring town of Frank and its mining company. Where one year ago a town mourned its dead and a mining company faced the most complete wreck of mine, machinery, and improvements that has ever overtaken a Canadian mine, is again today the scene of business bustle and mining activity. In the annals of Canadian mining the palm for indomitable pluck, perseverance and enterprise must be conceded to H. L. Frank, S. W. Gelo and the other head officials of the Canadian-American Coal Company, of Frank. To these men credit is due for bringing order our of chaos and the putting of the Frank mine upon even a more substantial basis than before the great catastrophe.

The old entry, which has been reopened, is now in on the seam to a depth of one and a half miles and is producing daily some 300 tons of good clean coal, all of which, after supplying the company's local customers, is eagerly taken by the C. P. R. for locomotive purposes. At the shaft sunk on the vien near the main line of the railway, the work of putting it into first class shape down to the 360 foot level has been completed. By August this shaft will be fully equipped and in a position to produce 400 tons of coal per day, which with the additional tonnage that can be easily taken out at the other workings of the mine will again place this property at the head of our producers with an output of not less than 1,000 tons per day. At the present time a force of 125 miners are given steady employment and this force will be largely augmented just as soon as the shaft is fully equipped. The cottages of the company are rapidly filling up with families and when the working force is increased, it will leave a shortage of houses and so the company are already perfecting plans for the erection of fifty additional cottages this fall. There is no red tape about this company, all the officials being practical men and so Mine Manager W. F. Collins, Superintendent J. Copeland and Secretary G. E. Wiltse are kept more than busy.

Around the town itself no complaints are heard from the business men and the hotels and stores are kept fairly busy. Considerable trade with outside camps is done here and Frank secures its full share of the trade of Lille, Bellevue and the valley. As Frank increases in size it keeps extending itself towards Blairmore and Blairmore in growing has the same tendency to reach out towards Frank, so that in spite of themselves these two towns will at no distant date form but one community.

Uncle Sam Angry

Washington, D. C., July 18.—It is probable that the attention of the British government will be directed to the movement conducted by the Canadian government to induce immigration from the United States to the Northwest Territories. It is felt here that there can be no objection to such efforts on the part of private immigration agencies, but when, as in this case, the government seeks to attract citizens of other countries the matter is one which calls for official remonstrance.

It appears that the Dominion department of the interior, through one of its assistant secretaries, has been sending broadcast throughout the northwestern states circular letters principally addressed to clergymen, professional men and persons of influence, describing in glowing terms the splendid resources of the Canadian Northwest and inviting immigration to the Territories.

ENTRY.—Entry may be made per the district in which the lant to be taken is situate, or, if the homesteader desires, he may, on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him. A fee of $10.00 is charged for a homestead entry.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required by the provisions of the Dominion Lands Act and the amendments thereto, to perform the conditions connected therewith, under one of the following upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three plans:

(1) At least six months' residence years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, reside upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent, may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If a settler has obtained a patent for his homestead, or a certificate for the issue of such patent, countersigned in the manner prescribed by this Act, and has obtained entry for a second homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by residence upon the first homestead, if the second homestead is in the vicintiy of the first homestead.

(4) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon said land.

The term "vicinity used above is meant to indicate the same township or an adjoining or cornering township.

A settler who avails himself of the provisions of Clauses 2, 3, or 4, must cultivate 30 acres of his homestead or substitute 30 head of stock with buildings for their accommodation, and have besides 30 acres substantfenced.

Every homesteader who fails to comply with the requirements of the homestead law is liable to have his entry cancelled, and the land may be again thrown open for entry.

Application for patent should be made at the end of three years, before the local agent, sub-agent, or Homestead Inspector. Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in-writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands, at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

RATEPAYERS MEETING

POORLY ATTENDED

Mayor Short Outlines the Main Features of the new City Charter Council's Action Supported

The public meeting in Robertson Hall last night called to discuss the provisions of the new city charter was very poorly attended. There were scarcely fifty ratepayers present. About nine o'clock Mayor Short called the meeting to order and after expressing his regrets at the small attendance, proceeded to outline some of the main features of the new charter and explained the steps which had been taken by the council on this matter.

Edmonton's present provincial powers are not wide enough. Regina, Moose Jaw and Calgary have all been incorporated as cities. This is all the more necessary for Edmonton on account of our various municipal owned enterprises. The council, having decided to seek city incorporation, looked about to find the best possible man to draw up a charter which person they found in Mr. Biggar, former city solicitor of Toronto, and now a resident of that city. The charter has been prepared to make it the clearest, and most comprehensible possible. The tendency of modern times is toward the principle of municipal ownership of all public utilities. The charter provides for this.

In the early history of a town everyone is public spirited and it is not difficult to get reliable and capable men to hold public positions. As the place grows, the duties devolving on the public bodies increase and at the same time they receive less thanks for their efforts. This has driven many good men from accepting a public office. The new city charter provides a means to circumvent this difficulty. It is proposed to sharply divide the legislative and the executive bodies. The council will be the legislative body who will say what is to be done, the executive body will consist of paid commissioners who will see that the work is properly, expeditiously and economically carried out. The term of office of the commissioners should be made permanent on good conduct. In this way the commissioners would from year to year be in exact touch with the municipal workings and each new council would merely direct on what is the proper course to take, leaving to the commissioners its execution. A prominent authority has stated that this is the only way in which graft and municipal jobbery can be eliminated.

With a system of commissioners the public money can be more economically spent.

Land taxation will form a prominent part of the new charter. The land will be taxed, not the improvements. A man will not be taxed more heavily on a lot because he builds a beautiful residence or a business block on it.

Business institutions such as banks will be taxed. All these are efforts towards obtaining a fairer method of taxation than that at present in vogue.

The size of the city will be enlarged, the boundaries to be extended east, north and west. Mayor Short thought that this was only fair as the property holders immediately adjoining the present city limits derived a great benefit and were not now called on to pay their share for enjoying those benefits.

Mr. Short then declared the meeting open for discussion.

It was moved by J. A. Clark seconded by J. McClellan that the meeting heartily endorses the action of the council in the matter of obtaining the city charter. The motion was carried unanimously.

J. McClellan stated that as he understood the charter there was no provision made for police government except that vested in the city council. He thought it would be advisable to have such provisions made.

After a short discussion on the subject of extending the city limits it was moved by J. McClellan seconded by W. J. Webster that the council include in the city limits such territory as in their judgment is advisable.

The meeting then adjourned.
